

METALS RISE IN PRICE

LONDON—From one cause or another, most of the important metals used industrially have risen substantially. The following table gives comparisons of prices of various metals at the end of March, 1905, and March, 1906.

Copper, per ton	£67 5 9	£83 15 0
Tin, per ton	£38 9 0	£68 17 6
Spelter, per ton	24 12 6	24 12 6
Steel, per ton	5 19 0	6 15 9
Lead, per ton	13 10 0	16 10 0
Silver, per oz.	2 2	2 6
Platinum, per oz.	4 2 6	4 8 6

Birmingham manufacturers attribute the rise in the majority of cases to the increase in the motor industry, but in the case of copper and platinum the development of electrical undertakings is also advanced as a reason. A further explanation in the case of platinum is found in the fact that a monopoly of the British supply is held by a Hatton Garden firm, which controls the output while available foreign supplies of this metal are diminishing because so much is required in the United States, the land of production, that less and less can be exported.

Since the end of March copper has risen further to £84 10s per ton and tin to £74. The cause of the rise in individual metals may be summarized as follows:

Copper—Development of electrical undertakings.

Lead—Development of electrical undertakings.

Aluminum—Development of electrical undertakings.

Tin—Diminishing supply from Straits settlements.

Steel—Activity in ship-building, armor plate, etc.

Silver—Development of the metal in the West Indies.

Platinum—Increase in demand for galvanized iron.
